NORWAY AND VICINITY.

The Election in Norway.
Election day in Norway passed off rather quietly although there was a subdued excitement and knots of voters gathered and discussed the situation. From the very first it was apparent that a large number of stickers was being used and it was conceded that the Democratic candidate for sheriff would carry the town and with a vote practically the reversal of the party votes or other candidates. This was exceeded in the count and undoubtedly a large share of the defective ballots were also intended for Mr. McIntire.

149 straight Republican votes were cast, 277 Democratic and the number of votes which could be counted were 670. 408 ballots were defective and had to be thrown out, while a number varying from 1 to 35 were blank for one or more of the offices. Carelessness in the use of stickers was noticeable, and the result of this misplacement is shown in the scattering vote. For county attorney, B. G. McIntire had 2, F. A. Foy 1, C. E. Holt 1; for judge of probate, F. A. Foy 1; for register of probate, B. G. McIntire 1, and for county commissioner, M. L. Kimball 1. The detailed vote of Norway is shown in the tabulated vote of the county. But 408 votes counted on the act to increase pay of members of State council, senator and representative.

Local politicians gathered in the Opera House and discussed the situation and received returns from about the county.

Orators from the Sunny South.

On this Friday evening at the Congregational church in Norway, the people of South Paris, Norway and vicinity have an opportunity rarely afforded them to hear without charge two distinguished men on a topic of interest to every parent of a boy or girl.

Gov. Aycock and Justice Winston of North Carolina have been secured to discuss the Common School Problem, and the public, which is urged to avail itself of this opportunity, is assured of a most valuable evening. In addition to the speakers mentioned Supt. W. W. Stetson will be present, and Mrs. Frank Kimball and Herman L. Horne will sing. Governor Aycock was the leading lawyer of his state before he was elected to his present position. He has led in the fight for better school buildings, more efficient teachers, more money for school purposes and equal school privileges for whites and blacks. He has met fierce opposition and discouraging indifference. He has won the battle and is known all over the country as the "Educational Governor" of the Union. He gives the most of his time to promoting the school interests of his state. It is descended from one of the oldest families in North Carolina, and is possessed of fine breeding and culture. He is an orator of the best Southern type, has a fine figure, pleasing voice and most attractive personality. One people will have the opportunity of a lifetime to see and hear one of the great men not only of the South but of the whole country. Governor Aycock is destined to fill a still larger place in the near future.

Judge Winston is one of the brainy, brilliant and witty men of his section. He is often spoken of as the peer of the famous, Henry Grady. No more fascinating speaker ever visited our State. It will be a great treat to listen to him.

It is hoped our people will attend in great numbers where such entertaining instruction is secured for them, and also to show by their presence that this section of Maine is vitally interested in the subjects discussed by its eminent visitors.

TWO SUCCESSFUL DAYS

SUNSHINE AND RAIN ON THE FAIR

First Baby Show a Brilliant Success

THURSDAY'S EXERCISES POSTPONED TO FRIDAY BECAUSE OF RAIN

Tuesday's Attendance Largest in History of Fair for First Day—Wednesday's Patronage but Five Hundred Less than Record of Last Year—Clear and Bright Weather Friday Gives Promise of Brilliant Wind-up to the Sixty-Second Exhibition—The Premium List.

Wednesday and Thursday.

The crowd of Wednesday as far as estimated was fourteen thousand. The receipts were not far less than the largest ever received, which was last year.

Between 700 and 800 people came on the morning train east and west to the fair and by noon the grounds presented as lively appearance as at any previous year. The fair was crowded full of people. The cattle stalls were visited by hundreds of them while the square front of the exhibition hall was crowded full, and hundreds of teams were hitched in available places. The new horse rails were proved of the greatest use and convenience.

Thursday morning, as it had rained steadily through the night and the forenoon, the management set the event forward a day, Thursday's events to be held Friday if pleasant.

Wednesday's Horse Races.

The races were the best that have been driven on the track for years. The grand stand was well filled with spectators, who enjoyed it immensely, even if occasionally it rained a little.

The 2.40 class was easily won by American Law, of the Mountain View Farm, South Paris. This race could be called a stallion race, as four out of the five starters were stallions and all fine acting and looking horses, and each one had lots of friends and admirers. American Law had the most speed, and won the race as horsemen say "easily with hands down," best time in 2.25. In the 3d heat Pattee's stallion "Lucero," acted badly and was shut out.

It took five heats in the 2.30 class and won by Pointer Patchen, owned by N. J. Foss of Cornish and in the 2.23 class four heats were trotted.

The judges were the same as on Tuesday, excepting G. A. Ames of Rumford Falls was timer in the place of H. G. Fletcher, who drove American Law and could not act as timer. Summary:

By the time of the opening of the races the grand stand was crowded to its fullest capacity with people, the fences were lined with people, both halves were crowded to suffocation, the pike was filled with sight-seers, while there was an attendance at the pulling ground which seriously impeded the contestants and rendered necessary the calling out of an officer to keep the track clear.

The showers drove many to shelter and made it very disagreeable getting around, yet most of the spectators stayed until late in the afternoon.

Friday Morning Opening.

Friday morning dawned bright and clear with a sharp tinge in the air, which prophesied of a surely good day, to complete the fair. At an early hour the officials and all connected with the management were on hand, the amusement and eating house people opened up their places of business. Teams began to come in in large quantities loaded with sight-seers. The band went to the grounds at nine o'clock, at which time the electric lights were run on short time, and the programme of Thursday was resumed and carried on as if nothing had happened. All indications pointed to a large crowd and very successful finishing day.

Pulling Oxen.

At 2 o'clock Wednesday the class of oxen 7 feet 6 inches and under was put on. The load 6135 pounds. Two pairs pulled in this match. James Thomes of Harrison started first, with a pair girthing 7 feet. They started off with the load in good shape and went 113 feet 4 inches.

The second pair of oxen belonged to J. W. Whitman of Buckfield girthing 7 feet 3 inches. They took the load 114 feet 8 inches.

Following the oxen the three years old steers were pulled with a load of 3469 pounds. The first pair belonged to Moses Young of Hartford girthing 6 feet 6 inches. They pulled the load 90 feet.

The second pair belonged to William F. Young of Norway girthing 6 feet 6 inches. They drew the load 93 feet 9 inches.

The third pair belonged to George Record of Buckfield, drove by Dana Hall of Bethel, 6 feet 1 inch and 6 feet 2 inches. They hauled the load down the course, back and down again. The total distance 252 feet.

The fourth pair belonged to H. A. Robbins, driven by Rufus K. Morrill, girthing 6 feet 5 inches. They made 101 feet 4 inches.

A Warning.

"It is bad to wish so many things so far removed from human goals, Hoffman great disaster has been the end in grief to human souls."

List to the tale of one young man who wished and wished and wished and wished.

He conjured up his shrewdest plan, And then, alas, the man got "dished."

He wished he was an old arm-chair, That he might hold his lady love.

He wished he was a lock of hair, Upon her temple just above his eye.

He wished he was a moonbeam bright, That he might steal into her room.

And in the morn when at her work, And then he wished he was a shoe.

And then he wished he was a shoe, That he might press against her lips.

asleep and laid away, baby in his cradle and Esther in her trundle bed. The coast now being clear, the girl thought to brush up around the fire before they departed. When she had done sweeping she set the hemlock broom in the cellar way never minding the stray shavings attached with a slight splash of fire.

"Why Isabelle," exclaimed little Hannah, "You'll set the house on fire."

"No, no it won't," retorted the idiot, "When the shavings have burned it will go out," and away they started in high glee.

In the front part of the house lived Josiah Dunn, whose wife, a sister of Mr. Jordan, having company, didn't go to meeting. Suddenly she heard the roar of fire and thinking the children were burning shavings for sport hastened to open the intervening door when the flames burst upon her. Knowing nothing of the children or their whereabouts she gave the alarm.

Little Emery, who had been left in charge of the house next door ran for the place of meeting and when she arrived there the door being open she exclaimed, "Mr. Jordan's house," and fell in a fainting fit. The entire audience leaped to their feet at once and ran for the scene of the conflagration, but when they came to the spot they saw it was too late to render aid even in saving furniture or clothing. But where were the children?

Presently they appeared with Isabel on the lead exclaiming, "Wonder where's my pin ball that aunt Sally gave me, O, that's in Mrs. Jordan's chest, that can't burn." Little Hannah soon revealed the whole story.

The parents now frantic with grief fell to the ground refusing aid and expressing a wish that they had met the same fate. The poor, simple girl now beginning to realize the great calamity all coming through her disobedience, began an attempt to approach her mistress but was repelled with a cry of anguish, "Oh, take her away, I can't bear to look on her, she will drive me crazy."

A rough fellow named Bill Walker seized her and leading her to a high fence threw her over with the threat of instant death if she ever showed herself again near the premises. After ascertaining the position of the sleeping children as near as possible they threw snow and water in large quantities till the fire was partially deadened and a change of direction sent the smoke in an opposite direction, where the remaining were discovered. What was left of poor little Esther's arms were extended upwards as if imploring help. Wm. Emery, Jr., seized a barn shovel and leaping into the fire brought out both bodies. The body of Esther was burned away as to expose her heart to plain view which was swallowed to an immense size and burst as soon as she was laid on the ground.

The grief stricken parents refused all aid or comfort for the time being but on the approach of nightfall they were lead to the home of one of their kin, neighbors.

The two remaining children, Hannah and Josiah were taken to the home of Capt. Snell.

This shocking accident cast a gloom over the whole community which lasted for weeks and months. The kind hearted people, not only inhabitants of this, but adjoining towns contributed to the comfort of this afflicted family and many tears of sympathy were shed.

The poor, simple girl whose disobedience had caused this terrible disaster was at the age of twelve years when she died. She was a good girl, tried to do one of the eastern towns where she found a home at the poorhouse from whence she came. Mr. Jordan did not build but returned to Fayette where he lived for several years, but died in the prime of life. His widow, aunt Isabelle, as she was familiarly called, lived to a good old age. She paid an occasional visit to West Poland and was gladly received but the effects of her bereavement were never visible.

It was no doubt designed that time and cause of this should serve in a measure to blunt our sorrow but this lady was down right broken-hearted, though after a time she again mingled in society of which she had formerly been a leader, but a look of sadness ever pervaded her countenance and to the day of her death she was never known to smile.

Little Hannah grew to womanhood and married Capt. Moses, son of Capt. Robert Snell and lived to a good old age. She reared a family of ten smart enterprising children, eight of whom passed on before her.

Josiah studied medicine and practiced in Fayette many years. He was a man of giant intellect and both in political and judicial matters he ever took a deep interest. He first and last held most of the offices within the precincts of his town and county.

We hope that all parents and heads of families whose eyes may fall upon this sad but simple sketch will heed the important lesson to never trust their children or household affairs with underlings who must be cared for by some one. They, as unfortunately should be treated kindly but keep them in their place and give no opportunity for mischief.

Why They Read The Advertiser.

An Excellent Paper.

My reason for taking the ADVERTISER is the simple fact that, through its columns I receive a weekly message from the good old town of Paris, where thirty years of my youthful days were passed. From the age of ten till I was twenty-three. Ten years of the time were spent on a farm. I then left farming and went to work in the little woolen mill at South Paris, where I remained nearly three years, till 1849, when I went to Lowell, Mass., and obtained a situation in the Middlesex Mills, where I remained one year and then went to the new city of Lawrence and secured a situation on what was then the Bay State Corporation and which failed up in the panic of '57, reorganized and started again in 1859 under the name of the Washington Mills. My years from 1846, when I left the farm, to 1893 were spent in the woolen mill business, principally carding and spinning at which I was always quite successful.

It is now fifty-five years since I left South Paris but still I hold the old place in affectionate remembrance. I love to visit the old town and note the changes that have taken place and the improvements that have been made.

I love to climb the mountain side where once a barefoot boy I stood, and from its summit far and wide survey the landscape as of old.

The names of all the old and middle aged people whom I knew fifty-five years ago are registered on the tombstones, and also a large portion of those of my own age and younger. Of my old schoolmates, to the best of my knowledge, only four of us remain to tell the story of our youthful experiences.

The only acquaintances I ever had in the town of Norway were old Dr. Danforth, who carried me through an attack of lung fever in 1847, and Cynthia Bolster, who worked in the mill when I did.

For the few surviving friends of my early days I feel an abiding interest. I like to hear of their success and prosperity, of what they are doing and the changes they are making, and for that reason I search the columns of the ADVERTISER, and frequently find an item in relation to some one of them that causes a thrill of pleasure.

I think the ADVERTISER is an excellent paper and for the above reason I take it. And wishing you success in your enterprise, I remain

Yours truly, A. PHELPS.

The Art of Living
By Professor CHARLES R. HENDERSON of the University of Chicago

THE ART OF LIVING IS AN ART WHICH WE ARE ALL TRYING TO LEARN. There are three things which we have to consider, the economical, the beautiful and the substantial sides of the subject. It is like an architect who is planning a house. He has to consider these same questions, and, unless he does, he will fail in his plans. Everything must have an end, but to attain this end we must have the knowledge how to do, and we must have the skill.

WE MUST ALL STRIVE AFTER HIGH IDEALS, FOR WITHOUT THEM LIFE WOULD BE LITTLE WORTH THE WHILE. IDEALISM IS WHAT LIFTS US UP TO NOBLE THINGS.

Our friends on the other side of the water have made the charge that our idealism has been submerged beneath our commercialism, but it is nevertheless true that this same commercialism, which we possessed to so remarkable a degree, is showing itself over Europe in the form of smokestacks, busy factories and buzzing wheels. THERE ARE HIGH IDEALS AMONG AMERICANS, EVEN IF WE ARE AN INDUSTRIAL NATION.

The art of living also includes knowledge, and this comprises continued higher education. Higher education has to be contradistinguished from accomplishment, the last touches of refinement which are added during the last years at the seminary or at the college. Higher education means the UNDERSTANDING OF THE LIFE ABOUT US, its necessities and the requirements of our fellow men. Again, we must believe in the truth, as well as we must believe in freedom. Freedom comprises a broad conception of things, grand and noble and elevating. It is only when liberal thought is flung in the public arena that the public is protected from falsehood.

We have all come to see that our lives are all bound together by ties that cannot be separated. Sociology teaches us that all men have to co-operate in order to attain to high ideals.

THOUGH HUMBLE OUR STATION AND SMALL OUR WORK, LET US DO IT TO THE BEST OF OUR ABILITY. WE ALL HAVE OUR PART TO PLAY, BUT WE CAN DO IT WELL, FOR, AFTER ALL, OUR TASK IS TO MAKE THE WORLD A LITTLE BETTER AND LIFE WORTH THE LIVING.

HOME IMPROVEMENT.

How to Beautify a Fence With Flowers and Vines.

In considering the grounds of a country home one feature is only too often neglected—namely, the fence, says the Brooklyn Eagle. The fence, far from being a detraction, as it is so frequently, to the beauty of the place, may be made one of its chief attractions. The memory of a fence bordering the grounds of a plain little cottage of suburban Boston still haunts the writer, though seen many years ago. It was a low wall of graystone, the top of which was completely covered with nasturtiums. All summer long this wall was a mass of brilliant bloom and a joy to every passerby. No matter how uncompromisingly ugly the fence is, it may with the exercise of artistic taste be transformed into a thing of beauty.

A picket fence is about as difficult a subject in this respect as it is possible to have, yet the owner of a country home in New York state has made hers the envy of all her neighbors. This is what she did to bring about the desired end: At the base of the fence along its entire length the ground was spaded and set with a variety of plants, large and small, the selection being made with a view of keeping something blooming the season through. About six inches from the top the inside of the fence was fitted with board shelves, and on these were placed at intervals jars of plants, including geraniums, begonias, verbenas and other house plants, as well as ferns.

Vines should not be overlooked as aids in beautifying the fence. For back yard fences the prime old fashioned hollyhocks, when set in close rows, become a highly decorative feature.

TO IMPROVE STREETS.

A Society Organized to Plant Trees in Chicago.

The Chicago Tree Planting society was organized recently to plant trees in the streets of Chicago. With the election of officers it was announced that one of the first works the society would undertake would be a fight on the gas and smoke nuisance, to be urged along new lines.

Then will come the planting of trees in the slum districts, the distribution of literature that will educate the people in tree planting and the starting of a movement to have the care and sometimes the planting of trees in streets placed in the hands of the park boards.

"Chicago has practically 1,100 miles of treeless streets," said George E. Hooker, the secretary of the organization, "and the planting of trees in them is an immense task. Gas and smoke are the greatest enemies of tree growth we have. One of our first duties will be to get after the smoke nuisance from a new angle."

Many thousands pamphlets telling the kinds of trees that will grow here and how to care for them, as well as urging their planting, are to be circulated in an effort to get people to plant trees in front of their homes. Officers of improvement associations are to be asked to co-operate with the society in the tree planting plans, and residents of the same block will be urged to unite in their tree planting efforts so as to secure uniformity. Citizens are also to be instructed in the art of pruning trees properly.—Chicago Chronicle.

"BUILD UP THE TOWN."

The Value to a Community of an Improvement Association.

An improvement association is an organization that should have the confidence and support of every citizen of the town which it is working to improve.

It is easy to make laws for the beautifying of a town, but their enforcement is more difficult. Officials, while zealous of enforcing laws and ordinances to them seemingly more important, are sometimes lax in the enforcement of the little details that go to make the town more beautiful. It is these organizations that bring these little details to the notice of the officials.

The members of an improvement association are men and women high up in the social and business affairs of the town, and yet they do not hesitate to devote their time and energy to the betterment of conditions of their fellow men, wholly without thought of mercenary advantage.

Stately and attractive shade trees, well kept lawns, styles of architecture embodying artistic designs and well kept streets are those little details that make a good town to live in, and it is for these that the improvement association is laboring.

Every man and woman, aiding the improvement association in its crusade is doing a work that will have a far more than pecuniary reward.

Flowers For Windows.

Not the least of the many good influences exerted by the town improvement societies is illustrated in the appearance of flower boxes before the windows of dwellings in many towns. A box hung from the window ledge costs little and can be kept filled with blooming plants at a very slight expense and with only such pains as will be well repaid in pleasure. To the passerby in the street such window gardens are all gain and they help greatly in beautifying the town.

Look After the Schoolhouses.

When the schools close for the summer the go-ahead towns will take advantage of the occasion to repaint and repair and get things ready for the fall and winter. Nothing hurts the looks of a town more than a dingy looking schoolhouse. It gives strangers the idea that the cause of education is secondary in that place.

Chasm Divides Youth and Age.

Dorothy Dix discusses the Gulf Dividing the two Extremes—The Follies of Youth and Old Foginess—Barrier Between Parents and Children.

When all is said the widest chasm in the world and the hardest to bridge over is that which divides youth from age. Between the two is the gulf in which lies all the illimitable ignorance and unfathomable experiences of two lives, and no matter how closely akin an old person and a young one may be, they are in some sort like travelers, who call to each other in a language one is only beginning to learn and that the other has half forgotten.

Hard to Remember.

Youth and age have curiously little in common. It is so hard to remember when one is shivering in the icy blast of December that the air still blows warm and sweet about young April. It is so difficult to realize when one has seen one's own meagre harvest gathered in that another is sowing in hope with all the possibilities of the future stretching before him, radiant with eternal promise. Above all when one has grown old and alone when one is tired of the weary show, when everything is as tedious as a twice-told tale, and the actions seem merely puppets whose mirth rings hollow, and whose tears are too false to move us—it is so hard to remember that another is looking at the play of life with fresh eyes and pulses that thrill to every varying phase of interest, ready to give it the tribute of their smiles or tears.

The Follies of Youth.

True and strange, but truest and strangest of all is this, that we should so soon forget the desires and emotions of our own youth. Listen to any middle-aged man of today. He does not hesitate to declare that they are imbeciles, and that there has been a general decadence of the human race since he was a boy.

"Look at me, sir," he cries, "when I was a boy did you ever see me smoking cigarettes? Did you ever observe me wearing a collar so high that it threatened to cut my ears off? Did you ever know me to waste my time and spend my money running around after little fly-up-the-creek girls instead of working so as to get a start in life? No, sir. That wasn't the kind of a man I was."

And then he sketches a picture of the boy he thinks he was—so wise, so virtuous, so industrious, so obedient to parents, so solicitous of his employer's welfare that it has no parallel, outside of the covers of Sunday school literature.

Develops Pessimism.

When he contrasts his own 50ns with the model he was at their age, and observes how far short they have fallen of that shining example, he is filled with the deepest pessimism, and darkly wonders what the country is coming to when the men of his generation are dead. As he looks at his daughters, he begins to think that there are no such noble, deserving youths as he was when they may hope to marry. If there were, he would ask nothing better for them; but how any girl not a raving lunatic could be rash enough to entrust herself to the modest young man passes his comprehension.

The Funny Part.

The funny part of it all is that he is in deadly earnest in these opinions. A kindly and obliterating hand has been drawn across the slate of memory, and the score wiped out against him. He has honestly forgotten that as a young man he shirked work, and cut school, and learned to smoke behind the barn, and that as a young man he followed the fashion, and never saved a cent until he got married, and that his wife's father made precisely the same remark about his daughter marrying him.

Reliable Memories.

Women, when they come to recalling the follies of their own youth, have no better or more reliable memories than men. No middle-aged woman ever listens to the conversation of a young girl and her bobbledown beau without a shudder at the idiosyncrasy of their remarks and a throb of gratitude to think that she never could have been that silly.

Never, she is firmly convinced was she guilty of uttering such inanities, never did she giggle, never could she have endured the society of such sap-headed youths. On the contrary she is positive that when she was young, she and the intellectual young men who visited her sat up decorously and discussed art and literature. She has forgotten how she and her girl chum used to lie awake half the night exchanging confidences and confessions that too perfectly every young man who parted his hair in the middle and clanked in the dry goods store, and how she used to read sickly poetry, and undress the dark and passionate passages, and write "how true" opposite them, and was altogether so silly and sentimental the wonder is that she ever escaped the fool killer.

Mamma Never Flirted.

What mother, in advising her daughters, ever failed to hold up her own impeccable youth for their emulation? Dear me, how proper we were then! How respectful to our parents, how willing to be guided by them when they picked out for us the good young man who led the prayer meeting instead of the young scapegrace who led the german that we had picked out for our Mamma never flirted, oh, no! She never sat out dances in the barn with unmarriedable but fascinating young men. She always kept everybody at their distance, and as for a kiss in the dark—horrors—such a thing was never done when she was young. "And how did you ever get married?" asks Miss Pert, and mamma breaks off her homily in confusion, because she has happened to remember—well, several things she has no mind to relate to her daughters.

Cherished Ideas Seem Antiquated.

What does youth, on its part, think of age? It is every thing as intolerant and as sure of its viewpoint being the superior one as the old. It is a terrible shock to our vanity to realize it, but it is true nevertheless, that youth does not regard those of us who are older as models to be imitated, but merely as object lessons of what to avoid. What mannerisms we have acquired that excite their derision! How antiquated our most cherished ideas appear to them! And as for dress, they are convinced that though they should live to be a million, they would never give away to the weakness of wearing a low cut collar and broad soled shoes, or leaving off their stays merely to be comfortable.

Bestowing a Compliment.

If their conversation appears to us inane, don't for a moment suppose that we seem anything to them but bore. The silliest chit of a young girl considers that she is bestowing a compliment on the wisest man by giving him ten minutes of her valuable time and entrancing

A prominent Southern lady, Mrs. Blanchard, of Nashville, Tenn., tells how she was cured of backache, dizziness, painful and irregular periods by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Gratitude compels me to acknowledge the great merit of your Vegetable Compound. I have suffered for four years with irregular and painful menstruation, also dizziness, pains in the back and lower limbs, and fitful sleep. I dreaded the time to come which would only mean suffering to me."

"Better health is all I wanted, and cure if possible. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought me health and happiness in a few short months. I feel like another person now. My aches and pains have left me. Life seems new and sweet to me, and everything seems pleasant and easy."

"Six bottles brought me health, and was worth more than months under the doctor's care, which really did not benefit me at all. I am satisfied there is no medicine so good for sick women as your Vegetable Compound, and I advocate it to my lady friends in need of medical help."—Mrs. B. A. BLANCHARD, 422 Broad St., Nashville, Tenn.

When women are troubled with irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhoea, displacement or ulceration of the womb, the bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, bloating (or flatulence), general debility, indigestion, and nervous prostration, or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, faintness, lassitude, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, "all-gone" and "want-to-be-alone" feelings, blues and hopelessness, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles. Refuse to buy any other medicine, for you need the best.

A Severe Case of Womb Trouble Cured in Philadelphia.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been cured of severe female troubles by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was nearly ready to give up, but seeing your advertisement I purchased one bottle of your medicine, and it did me so much good that I purchased another, and the result was so satisfactory that I bought six more bottles, and am now feeling like a new woman. I shall never be without it. I hope that my testimonial will convince women that your Vegetable Compound is the greatest medicine in the world for falling of the womb or any other female complaints."—Mrs. MAY CONY, 2680 Birch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Remember, every woman is cordially invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham if there is anything about her symptoms she does not understand. Her address is Lynn, Mass., her advice is free and cheerfully given to every ailing woman who asks for it.

giggles, while the youth of twenty who devotes a little conversation to an elderly woman, no matter how brilliant or famous she may be, does it with the conscious air of conferring a favor on her that she hasn't any right to look for at her time of life.

Old Foginess.

There is no criticism so merciless and unsparring, no judgment so hard as that of youth. It makes no excuses. Failure is failure to it, with no extenuating circumstances. Every young person is so cocksure that their own life is going to be a triumphant march, unmarred by mistakes, that they have little pity for those who have fallen by the wayside. Every boy can tell you to a dot where his father erred in his business calculations. He regards the old gentleman's caution as cowardice, his sticking to the methods that have been tried and successful as old foginess. The lad intends, when the business gets into his possession, to make a clean sweep of all the old employees and start radical changes that he is convinced will make him a millionaire right off of the bat, but that generally land him in the hands of a receiver. Then, by the time he has found out that he wasn't so much smarter than his father after all, he has grown middle aged himself, and shifted to the other point of view.

Returns the Compliment.

Every girl is equally sure that she knows better than her mother how to keep house and manage a servant. If the older woman thinks the young girl is silly, the girl returns the compliment with interest by regarding the middle aged woman who is wrestling with the servant question, as rank failures. She is dead sure that the great domestic problem will be solved as soon as she brings her giant intellect to bear upon it. It isn't however, and her daughter inherits the same old conundrum, and the same opinion that she is smarter than her mother.

Barrier Between Parents and Children. There are few things more to be deplored than this lack of sympathy and understanding between youth and age. In families, in particular, it works grievous wrong, and raises a barrier between parents and children that nothing can break down. The boy, with all the morbid vanity of youth, knows that his father is going to sneer at his opinions, and deride his clothes, and he takes his confidences and his plans to strangers. The girl, who is perfectly aware that her parents are only listening to the conversation of her friends to ridicule it, takes care that they shall hear as little as possible, and so it often happens that they do not know who her associates are, or even the man she marries.

AN OLD MAN'S TRIBUTE.

An Ohio Fruit Raiser, 78 Years Old, Cured of a Terrible Case After Ten Years of Suffering.

When suffering daily torture from backache, rheumatic pain, any ill of kidneys or bladder, turn to Doan's Kidney Pills. A cure endorsed by thousands. Read an old man's tribute.

Stacy Justus, fruit dealer, of Mentor, Ohio, writes: "I was cured by Doan's Kidney Pills of a severe case of kidney trouble of eight or ten years' standing. I suffered the most severe backache and other pains in the region of the kidneys. These were especially severe when stooping to lift anything, and often I could hardly straighten my back. The aching was bad in the daytime, but just as bad at night, and I was always lame in the morning. I was troubled with rheumatic pains and dropsical swelling of the feet. The urinary passages were painful, and the secretions were discolored and so free that often I had to rise at night. I felt tired all day. Half a box served to relieve me, and three boxes effected a permanent cure."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Justus will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address: Foster-McLure Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sold by all druggists; price, fifty cents per box.

Reunion of Dresser Family.

The second annual reunion of the Dresser family was held at the camp of Edwin S. Hutchins, Kezar Falls, Lovell, Aug. 25. The friends and relatives began to gather in the morning until about 65 were present. A sumptuous dinner was on the table promptly at 12.30 and was enjoyed by all.

The program for the afternoon was opened with music by the orchestra, after which the camp was christened "The Bungalow" by little Mary Ann Hutchins, the great-granddaughter of Stephen Dresser and the granddaughter of our host and hostess. This was followed by a historical address and anecdotes of the family by John A. Farrington of Lovell.

A poem written for the occasion was read by Walter Jones of Niagara Falls. There were speeches by Lincoln Dresser, Eben Dresser, E. B. Dresser, and remarks by other friends, also letters of regret from absent friends were read.

After a few appropriate remarks a huge bouquet was presented Geo. Shirley, one of the guests, in honor of his 72nd birthday.

As evening came on a fine supper was served. Friends from adjoining camps came, and all united in the festive dance and a very social evening was spent until a late hour.

This camp is one of two owned by Mr. Hutchins, beautifully situated on the west shore of the lake. It is large and commodious, the main room being 26x28 ft. The huge fireplace and chimney constructed of beautiful specimens of natural rock would be an ornament to any public building.

The oldest representative of the family present was Mrs. Alice Charles of Fryeburg, aged 81, the youngest, Clifford Gerry Kimball, aged 15.

Much credit for the success of this occasion is due to all the friends and relatives who entertained their guests most royally.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from a teaspoon to a tablespoon, it acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. It cures one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circular and testimonials.
